

Collegiate Internship Program

Program Overview

Internship opportunities are available through Athletic Performance Inc. for college students pursuing accreditation through the National Strength and Conditioning Association. Qualified candidates must have a Bachelor's Degree, or junior/senior standing in Exercise Science or related field, and have successfully completed the following prerequisites: Human Anatomy and Physiology, Kinesiology, Exercise Physiology, Prevention and Care of Athletic Injuries, Evaluation and Measurement, Adult CPR and Human Nutrition.

Under the supervision of experienced, educated and certified Sports Performance Coaches, students will be directly involved with API's sports performance training program including evaluation, program design and instruction, as well as administrative duties.

During your internship, you will coach middle school, high school and collegiate athletes in the following areas of sports performance training:

- Dynamic Warm-up and Flexibility Drills
- Muscular Imbalance and Range of Motion (ROM) evaluation
- Core Stabilization and Strength techniques
- Olympic Lifting
- Plyometric Training
- Anaerobic and Aerobic Conditioning
- Agility Training (multi-directional)
- Speed Development (linear and lateral)
- Strength Training

Part-time and full-time internship opportunities are available during the fall and winter/spring semesters and the summer. Student interns should be committed to the profession of sport performance training; and as such, be willing and eager to participate in all facets of program development.

Deadlines for applications:

- Fall Semester: July 15th
- Winter/Spring Semester: November 15th
- Summer: April 15th
